Dear Admiral Turner:

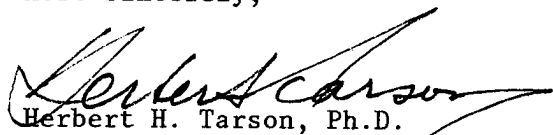

This week I ran into a high school classmate of yours, [redacted] [redacted] strongly recommended that we invite you to deliver the commencement address at National University. When I told him we had previously invited you, he was both surprised and delighted.

May I again extend to you an invitation to be our commencement speaker on Sunday, June 14 at our new campus in Vista, California, 40 miles north of San Diego.

Please let me know if this is agreeable with you. I will then recommend to the Board that you be awarded an Honorary Doctorate Degree in recognition of your splendid accomplishments during the past quarter century.

Most sincerely,

Dear Dr. Tarson,

Thank you for your letter of March 28th. Regretfully, I am still unable to say with any certainty whether I will be able to deliver the Commencement Address in July. Therefore, I must reluctantly decline your gracious offer.

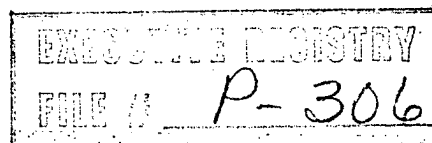

My apologies for the inconvenience this may have caused to you and National University. I wish it could have been otherwise.

I am indeed honored that the Board of Trustees has considered me for such prestigious recognition.

Yours sincerely,

STANSFIELD TURNER
